

I am VERY against any changes in the current telephone privacy laws. INFACT i believe that anyone using the phone for solicitation of any type should not be allowed to use any caller ID blocking service either. I still get calls from people that I cannot report because I have no idea where they called from for sure.

I used to get calls everyday, EVERYday and now they have gone down to a few each month. It's one thing to send junk mail, I can throw that away without having troubled with it but it's something altogether different when people are allowed to interrupt my family time without invitation via the telephone.

If this law is changed to lessen it's effectiveness it will be proof positive that laws are made for those who can pay form them and not to insure what is right.

Rick Cooper